Leonardo's Ahead Again!

In 1478, when Leonardo da Vinci was 24 years old, he drew a sketch for a self propelled vehicle. His sketch has recently been turned in a 1/3 scale working model.

The basics go like this:

A coil spring is wound by moving the wheels in the opposite direction of travel and a brake is set. The path of the forward movement is set by locking the position of the front wheel. When the brake is released the vehicle travels forward. Sound familiar?

This puppy even has leaf springs for suspension. Remember, this 1478! The first Ford was built 1896.

Just a note: It took our guys 6 months of study to turn the sketch into a working model.
